Reverend Sir

I am enclosing herewith a copy of Troyte's "Change Ringing," which was published by my father, here in Exeter in 1870 or '71.
This little book was in constant demand until 1942, when all our stocks in Exeter London & Plymouth were destroyed in German air raids & most disastrously the plates from which it was printed were so damaged that they were useless.
I managed to salve this odd copy some where and have kept it for sentimental reasons, but seeing your appeal and knowing as I do, that such books are scarce & hard to come by, I have pleasure in making this small response, & I hope you may get others. There must be hundreds about up & down the country.

Yours faithfully
Frank Eland
